

M.S. in Supply Chain Management

The Martin J. Whitman School of Management at Syracuse University is home to the nation's premier supply chain management (SCM) program. Founded in 1919 as a specialization in traffic and transportation, it has evolved into a nationally renowned, innovative program that focuses on improving efficiencies in SCM while training graduates to make meaningful contributions in the marketplace.

The global curriculum of the M.S. in SCM at Whitman combines classroom and experiential learning to help students build a solid knowledge base, while developing strategic thinking skills. The analytical skills gained through the program also help graduates understand the implications of any business decision.
