Today’s fast-paced, global economy requires accounting professionals to think critically in complex commerce situations. The Joseph I. Lubin School of Accounting in the Whitman School of Management offers an MS in Accounting that pairs a comprehensive curriculum with real-world experience to produce confident and competent practicing accountants, consultants and managers.

Our program accommodates students with an undergraduate accounting degree as well as those with an undergraduate degree in another academic area who may need to take additional courses. We offer a traditional 9-month degree option as well as a 16-month track for students who want to spread out credits and incorporate a summer internship.

Both options include the same relevant and timely curriculum taught by our accomplished faculty. We offer a flexible elective schedule so that you can integrate different aspects of business into your degree, and participation in professional associations, seminars and networking events will give you an edge as you work with Whitman’s dedicated Career Center to pursue a professional position. Many of the leading firms, such as PwC, KPMG, Deloitte and Ernst & Young, consistently put our MS in Accounting graduates to work.

In 1920, the Whitman School of Management became the 16th school in the nation to earn AACSB accreditation.

The Whitman School’s MS Accounting program has shaped my professional career. The classroom topics were undoubtedly advanced and thought provoking, and the relationships developed with my professors were some of the most influential aspects of the program. I am continuously amazed by the formidable knowledge base and preparation I gained during my studies at Whitman. The MS Accounting program has helped me feel more confident that, as I enter the workforce, I will be sufficiently equipped to handle anything that comes my way.
