EXPERIENCE MATTERS

Our MBA program will help transform your career and better prepare you to tackle real-world business problems. Whitman’s well-rounded curriculum is combined with practical experience offered through our unique Experiential Learning program. This program requires students to apply the practical applications of their classroom learning to real business problems.

The Experiential Learning program has greatly impacted my ability to add value to a loosely-defined project in my new career in Marketing at Carestream Health. For example, if two years ago my supervisor had given me a file of data and said, ‘Find something useful that we can do with this,’ I would have had no idea where to start. But that exact scenario happened to me early on, and I found that I had a lot of ideas that could positively impact our business. I’m finding that this is really what managers look for from newly-graduated MBAs. They want us to identify areas of opportunity within the company, and to suggest actionable plans for improvement. Our in-class Experiential Learning assignments were often like that. The assignments were always challenging, but I grew as a result of the work I put in.

WHITMAN CAREER CENTER

The goal of the career and professional development program for graduate students is to create understanding of career paths for business managers, and to develop the communication skills to secure career positions within industry-areas of interest. Through a three step program, students become prepared to communicate with recruiters and business leaders in a fashion that is articulate and persuasive in order to secure career goals.

The program, Onboarding-Orientation-Ongoing, allows students to develop skills and competencies through on-line assignments, career workshops, alumni mentoring, and personal coaching. With the resources available, the key skill to success still lies with each student. Your energy and effort drives your ability to secure the career you desire.
